Project Title: Lana Del Rey: The Eras

My microsite will tell the story of Lana Del Rey, from Lizzy Grant playing small New York clubs to one of the most influential songwriters of her generation. Her career is naturally organized into album eras, each with its own sound and look, so I want the site to move through her life in roughly chronological order and then step back to look at her style and influence. The site will have seven pages with a simple top navigation that collapses into a menu on smaller screens. Each page will open with a large image and a short intro, then break into smaller sections with key facts pulled out so it's easy to scan. Visually, I want it to feel cinematic and a little vintage, drawing on the 1950s to 1970s Americana imagery that shows up throughout her work.

Page 1: Home / Introduction

- Who Lana Del Rey is: an American singer-songwriter born Elizabeth Woolridge Grant on June 21, 1985, in New York City
- Short overview of her sound: melancholic, cinematic music about glamour, romance, and American nostalgia
- A few quick facts up front, like her Grammy nominations, Album of the Year nod for Norman Fucking Rockwell!, and her place on Rolling Stone's list of the greatest singers of all time
- Large hero image with navigation into each section of the site

- Childhood in Lake Placid, New York, and singing as a cantor at her church
- Boarding school at Kent School in Connecticut
- Studying philosophy at Fordham University, graduating in 2008
- Her early stage names (Lizzy Grant, May Jailer, Sparkle Jump Rope Queen) and her first releases: the Kill Kill EP (2008) and the album Lana Del Ray (2010)
- Where the name Lana Del Rey came from: actress Lana Turner and the Ford Del Rey car

Page 3: The Breakthrough (2011 to 2013)

- The homemade "Video Games" music video going viral in 2011 and leading to a major-label deal
- Born to Die (2012): its chart success and singles like "Born to Die" and "Summertime Sadness"
- The early backlash, including the widely criticized Saturday Night Live performance and debates over whether her image was manufactured
- The Paradise EP, the single "Ride," and her short film Tropico
- "Young and Beautiful" for The Great Gatsby

Page 4: The Albums

- An interactive timeline of her album eras, with the cover, release year, and a few key songs for each
- Ultraviolence (2014), Honeymoon (2015), and Lust for Life (2017)
- Norman Fucking Rockwell! (2019), her most acclaimed album and a Grammy nominee for Album of the Year
- Chemtrails over the Country Club and Blue Banisters (both 2021)
- Did You Know That There's a Tunnel Under Ocean Blvd (2023) and her move toward a country sound in her newest work
- Recent live milestones like headlining Coachella in 2024 and playing stadiums in the US and UK

- Her musical style, which mixes dream pop, baroque pop, and rock, and her low, smoky contralto voice
- Influences from music (Frank Sinatra, Nina Simone, Billie Holiday, Amy Winehouse), literature (Walt Whitman, Allen Ginsberg), and film (David Lynch)
- Her visual world: vintage Americana, old Hollywood glamour, and the home-video look of her early music videos
- How critics have read her image over time, from early skepticism to being seen as a major influence on younger artists
- Image gallery comparing the look of each era

Page 6: Beyond the Albums

- Her poetry book Violet Bent Backwards over the Grass (2020)
- Songs written for film, including "Once Upon a Dream" for Maleficent and the Golden Globe nominated "Big Eyes"
- Notable collaborations with The Weeknd, Taylor Swift ("Snow on the Beach"), and Ariana Grande and Miley Cyrus ("Don't Call Me Angel")
- Awards and recognition: her Grammy win, two Brit Awards, and an Ivor Novello award for "Video Games"
